During the 2016/2017 reporting period, Liverpool Hope University undertook a number of activities that underscore its commitment to UNAI and its principles. The following examples stand out as particularly noteworthy:

1. Addressing poverty: the Archbishop Desmond Tutu Centre for War and Peace Studies is hosting, in cooperation with the Justice and Peace Commission and the Archbishop Romero Trust the talk by diplomat and politician Ruben Zamora (permanent representative of the UN for el Salvador until late 2017) on the Social Challenges of El Salvador Today. He will be giving three talks in the University for the wider community, the academic community and students on poverty and social justice on the 19th of March. Zamora will be accompanied in one of the talks by Clare Dixon, Regional Manager for Latin America and Caribbean at CAFOD.

2. Education for all: all of the activities of the Archbishop Desmond Tutu Centre for War and Peace Studies (with the only exception of its annual conference) are open to the public to attend and participate without paying a fee. Each year we have organised around 16th events (symposiums, talks, discussions) on issues related to war and peace building engaging academics and practitioners from all disciplinary and professional backgrounds interested and contributing to these issues.

4. Global citizenship and 7. Intercultural dialogue: the Archbishop Desmond Tutu Centre for War and Peace Studies is actively engaged in Big Hope2, a global youth congress taking place from 13th to 20th of June 2018. Big Hope2 will provide the opportunity for young people from diverse backgrounds to come together to explore and debate key issues affecting individuals and societies around the world, such as freedom, conflict, equality and change. Specifically, the Centre is organising a panel on Peace and youth engagement with the participation of Pat Gaffney, General Secretary of Pax Christi Liverpool: Steve Atherton, Justice and Peace Fieldworker Archdiocese of Liverpool; Nadine Daniel, National Refugee Welcome Coordinator, Mission & Public Affairs Division | Archbishops Council | Church House; Ivana Gabalova, Anne
6. Human Rights: the Archbishop Desmond Tutu Centre for War and Peace Studies has organised during the academic year 2017/2018 activities focused on human rights and conflict including a talk by Lord Alton of Liverpool entitled "How do you solve a problem like Korea?" (October 20, 2017). The presentation by the Ambassador of Colombia for the UK on the peace process in the launch of the book by Catalina Montoya and Maryluz Vallejo "The Boundaries of debate on Land Restitution" (November 7, 2018). The public Conference "The Balfour Declaration (1917-2017): Past, Present and Future" (November 15, 2017). The talk by Dr Vsevolod Samokhvalov, journalist and Lecturer at the University of Liege and Free University of Brussels on Russia and Ukraine relations (January 23, 2018). The public lectures given by a delegation of the Alexandria Library about Change in the Arab World and the need to protect liberal principles in Egypt (March 5-9, 2018), the presentation of the "Mother's Day Project: exploring maternal and artistic strategies towards a more peaceful world" with guest Israeli artist Shira Richter (March 8, 2018), among others.

7. Intercultural dialogue: all our events, including the ones exemplified in the earlier point, are aimed at allowing academic and non-academic community to explore pressing issues of war and peace in different parts of the world, inviting also international speakers to provide an authoritative discussion of such issues.

8. Peace and conflict resolution: that is the main vocation of the Archbishop Desmond Tutu Centre for War and Peace Studies and the core issue for all the activities done by the Centre, for example through our annual conferences, dedicated to "Identity and memory in war and peace building" (July 2, 2018) or "Restoring Peace: Building post-conflict societies" (July 3, 2017). These conferences are attended by an international audience, and mix people of academic and professional backgrounds.
